Be Interesting.

Terry McGovern will don his fighting togs next Friday night in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, or since he beat Dave Sullivan in Louisville last Washington's Birthday. McGovern's opponent will be Joe Bernstein, as good a six-round fighter as could be found. McGovern's reappearance will be interesting for many reasons. First of all, it will show the advantages or disadvantages of a year of idleness. Will the little terror Nashville to ride at exercise for Pat lisplay that same do or die aggressiveness that characterized his ring work before he knew defeat, or will the sting of the knockout by "Young Corbett" show itself by a display of wariness? Terry says he hasn't changed. "I'll and up; one fight in my usual way and I'll win in my usual way, but I won't take any Betting. Chances," he says. "I want to get another try at 'Corbett.'
